Uncertainty as a Great Opportunity

Lech Wałęsa

The EURAM 2015 theme could not have been more emblematic for Koźmiński University the host of EURAM 2015 in the city of Warsaw, Poland. While Warsaw and its history complimented the conference theme well due to its share of lessons in coping with uncertainty, the opening Keynote Speech for the 15th EURAM conference was given by Lech Wałęsa, a historical figure who can attest to that history in the making. A legendary Solidarity leader of the first independent trade union, Lech Wałęsa played a significant role in bringing about the downfall of communism in Poland. He received the Nobel Prize for Peace in 1983 and went on to become the first democratically elected president of the Republic of Poland. Lech Wałęsa served as president between 1990 and 1995. Lech Wałęsa opened his keynote with a bold claim one that he rightfully deserves. “I am revolutionist”, And then went on to amuse his audience reciting history and tales of wisdom the like of ‘great divisions’; of 200 men who fought for change against 200,000 Soviet soldiers with little success; yet even with such uncertainty came a great opportunity provided by a papal appointment and other supporters. Within a year of Pope John Paul II’s appointment, Lech Wałęsa had gathered over two million supporters. Change was now not only possible but inevitable. ‘I want you to believe’, he lamented. Soviet soldiers watched the rallies as the people cheered for their Polish Pope. Change had happen. In his speech, he also called on business leaders to take action in the fight for freedom and unity. Although he spoke on various issues both at macro and micro levels of geopolitical environment, his message was fundamentally an unequivocal and eloquent. A call to all to take responsibility and fight for freedom and unity.
The second Key Note speaker Lila Tretikov, executive director of the Wikimedia Foundation, gave an inspiring speech touching on challenges and opportunities technology and the student for the future. She also spoke about a workable business model of the non-profit Wikimedia and the challenges for educating the more connected and technologically adept student of the future. Lila Tretikov is the Executive Director of the Wikimedia Foundation, which is a non-profit foundation that provides equal access to knowledge through services like Wikipedia; the world’s largest encyclopedia, available in 285 languages and the fifth most popular website in the world.

Prof. Koźmiński

The closing keynote was presented by Prof. Koźmiński, taking the conference theme into detail and elaborating on the uncertainties and challenges of management as a practice but also as a school and how that can be shaped by recognising an opportunity with the model. He challenged his audience mainly academicians to rethink management theory that was taught at his time in college and the same theory being taught now when so much has changed. He asked what resources organizations need to develop in order to be able to capture the changes that uncertainty may bring? Which organizational forms and structures respond well to the challenge of uncertainty? What kind of leadership is most suited to navigating organizations through the waves of unexpected and unpredictable storms? How can we better educate people to make them more competent in meeting with uncertainty? How should organizations manage their boundaries in order to be able to absorb changes that uncertainty carries? Are the notions that we already seem to know well (such as innovation, knowledge, intellectual capital, leadership…) perhaps assuming a new meaning at the time of uncertainty?

Other participants have taking EURAM 15 experience with them to their blogs – below is from Alex Hope

All in all the EURAM 2015 conference was a fantastic event and one that was very productive both in terms of learning, receipt of prizes, opportunities for further work and publications, and perhaps most importantly connections and friendships made. I can highly recommend the EURAM conferences to anybody interested in management or business related topics and I am looking forward to EURAM 2016 which is to be held in Paris at the University Paris-Est Creteil (UPEC) on the topic of ‘Manageable Cooperation.’
